PREFACE

More than two decades have passed since Webster's Geographical Dictionary first appeared. During this time the world has witnessed a number of significant political developments, shifts in population, and a reorientation of economies at both the national and the regional levels. The editors attempted to record the more important changes in a number of revisions of the initial work, but the limitations of revisions and the magnitude of change made it desirable to review critically the entire work and recompose the book.

Webster's New Geographical Dictionary consists of more than 47,000 entries, as compared with some 40,000 in the original work, and contains 218 maps prepared for this edition by Hammond Incorporated, as compared with 159 in its predecessor work. The objective of the new work is to provide briefly essential information on spelling, pronunciation, and, depending on the nature of the entry, location, population, size (e.g., area, height, length), economy, and history. Entries have been selected on the basis of their usefulness and interest to the general reader and include the world's independent states, dependencies, major administrative subdivisions, largest cities, and significant natural physical features. In addition, a large number of entries of historical interest have been included.

Alphabetization of entries has been governed in most instances by the use of conventional spelling. But a significant number of alternate and former names have been included, which, together with foreign-language variants, produce some 15,000 cross-references.

Inasmuch as Webster's New Geographical Dictionary will have its widest distribution in the United States and Canada, entries for those two countries, and to a lesser extent for other English-speaking states, have been included on a scale considerably broader than that used for other parts of the world. In the United States and Canada, for example, nearly all incorporated places with a population of more than 2500 have been included; examples of minimum figures for other areas are: Australia and New Zealand 8000; Africa—Algeria 30,000, Egypt 50,000, Ethiopia 20,000, Ivory Coast 20,000, Kenya 20,000, Nigeria 50,000, South Africa 8000, Tanzania 15,000; Asia—China 100,000, India 50,000, Indonesia 50,000, Iran 30,000, Japan 50,000, Malaysia 20,000, Pakistan 50,000, Turkey 30,000; Europe—United Kingdom 10,000, U.S.S.R. 40,000, other states 20,000; Latin America—municipalities in Brazil and Mexico 50,000 and 30,000 respectively, other states 20,000.

A large number of communities with populations below the minima indicated above have been included because of their regional importance or historical interest. In addition, all county seats in the United States have been included irrespective of their population size.

Population figures were taken from the most recent available official sources. In a number of instances, the figures given in the book were not available during the planning stages and, as a result, cut-off points had to be based on earlier figures. More recent figures were entered as they became available up to the time of going to press.

STAFF

The editorial research and preparation of the text for Webster's New Geographical Dictionary were directed by Arthur J. Stevenson, assisted by Roland J. Green, Romas Kinka, and María B. Masó Fernández. Copy editing was supervised by Necia Brown, assisted by Charles M. Cegielski, Rama Deva, Marilyn Klein, and Lois C. Lantz. Cross-referencing was supervised by Frances Latham, assisted by Grace Lord and Mary Neumann. Editorial coordinators were William S. Jarrett and Margaret Sutton. Pronunciations were prepared by Dolores R. Harris and Raymond R. Wilson under the direction of Edward Artin. The Hammond maps were prepared under the direction of Martin A. Bacheller, Robert Laughlin, and Ashley F. Talbot.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The number of individuals, organizations, and government agencies providing data used in this book is large, and only an abbreviated list is given below. The editors acknowledge with thanks permission to make use of various published reports, and are happy to record their debt to the many persons whose assistance in various ways greatly facilitated their work.

Arab Information Center, Washington, D.C.; Australian News and Information Bureau, New York City; Board on Geographic Names, Washington, D.C.; British Information Services, New York City; Bureau of Census and Statistics, Manila, The Philippines; Bureau of Mines, Washington, D.C.; Bureau of Reclamation, Washington, D.C.; Bureau of Statistics, Office of the Prime Minister, Tokyo, Japan; Bureau of Statistics, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania; Bureau of the Census, Washington, D.C.; Canadian Permanent Committee on Geographical Names, Ottawa, Canada; Central Agency for Public Mobilisation and Statistics, Cairo, Egypt; Central Bureau of Statistics, Jerusalem, Israel; Central Bureau of Statistics, The Hague, The Netherlands; Central Bureau of Statistics, Oslo, Norway; Central Statistical Authority under the Council of Ministers of the U.S.S.R., Moscow, U.S.S.R.; Central Statistical Board, Bucharest, Romania; Central Statistical Office, Addis Ababa, Ethiopia; Central Statistical Office, Helsinki, Finland; Central Statistical Office, Warsaw, Poland; Commonwealth Bureau of Census and Statistics, Canberra, Australia; Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C.; Department of Community Services, Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, Canada; Department of Highways, Carson City, Nevada; Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development, Ottawa, Canada; Department of Lands, Forests, and Water Resources, Victoria, British Columbia, Canada; Department of Municipal Affairs, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada; Department of Municipal Affairs, Toronto, Ontario, Canada; Department of State, Washington, D.C.; Department of Statistics, Kabul, Afghanistan; Department of Statistics, Wellington, New Zealand; Department of Statistics, Pretoria, Rep. of South Africa; Eidgenössisches Statistisches Amt, Bern, Switzerland; Environmental Science Services Administration, Washington, D.C.; William O. Field, American Geographical Society, New York City; Geological Survey of Canada, Ottawa, Canada; Information Service of South Africa, New York City; Institut für Landeskunde, Bad Godesberg, West Germany; Institut National de la Statistique, Kinshasa, Zaire; Institut National de la Statistique et des Études Économiques, Paris, France; Institut National de Statistique, Brussels, Belgium; Instituto Brasileiro de Estatística, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; Instituto Centrale di Statistica, Rome, Italy; Instituto Nacional de Estadística, Madrid, Spain; Instituto Nacional de Estadística y Censos, Buenos Aires, Argentina; Legislative Counsel Bureau, Carson City, Nevada; National Central Bureau of Statistics, Stockholm, Sweden; National Information Office to the Council of Ministers, Sofia, Bulgaria; National Park Service, Washington, D.C.; National Statistical Institute, Lisbon, Portugal; National Statistical Service of Greece, Athens, Greece; Office of Population Censuses and Surveys, London, England; Österreichisches Statistisches Zentralamt, Vienna, Austria; Staatliche Zentralverwaltung für Statistik, East Berlin, East Germany; State Institute of Statistics, Ankara, Turkey; Statistical Centre of Iran, Tehran, Iran; Statistics Canada, Ottawa, Canada; Statistisches Bundesamt, Wiesbaden, West Germany; Tennessee Valley Authority, Knoxville, Tennessee; Union Research Institute, Kowloon, Hong Kong; United States Army Engineer Topographic Data Center, Washington, D.C.; United States Geological Survey, Washington, D.C.; United States Naval Oceanographic Office, Washington, D.C. Population figures for cities in the People's Republic of China were taken with permission from World Urbanization 1950-1970 Volume I: Basic Data for Cities, Countries, and Regions, (1969) University of California, Berkeley, by Kingsley Davis, to whom special thanks are due.

For the 1984 copyright printing, a concerted effort was made to provide the most recent available population figures at entries requiring them. In that effort, published reports from most of the organizations and government agencies named above were again of great assistance, as were reports from the following additional organizations and agencies. All are gratefully acknowledged.

Australian Bureau of Statistics, Canberra, Australia; Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics, Dacca, Bangladesh; Bundesamt für Statistik, Bern, Switzerland; Central Bureau of Statistics, Nairobi, Kenya; Central Bureau of Statistics, Damascus, Syria; Central Statistics Bureau, Djakarta, Indonesia; Central Statistics Office, Dublin, Ireland; Central Statistics Office, Warsaw, Poland; Central Statistics Office, Harare, Zimbabwe; Danmarks Statistik, Copenhagen, Denmark; Direccion General de Estadística, Guatemala, Guatemala; Federální Statistický Úřad, Prague, Czechoslovakia; Fundação Instituto Brasileiro de Geografia e Estatística, Brasília, Brazil; Instituto Nacional de Estadística, Lima, Peru; Instituto Nacional de Estatística, Lisbon, Portugal; National Bureau of Statistics, Seoul, South Korea; National Census and Statistics Office, Manila, Philippines; Office of the Registrar General and Census Commissioner for India, New Delhi, India; Population Census Organization, Islamabad, Pakistan; Statistics Bureau, Tokyo, Japan; Sveriges Officiella Statistik, Stockholm, Sweden.

Special thanks are due to the Geography Department of Encyclopaedia Britannica, Chicago, Illinois, for advice and information of several kinds and to the Editorial Department of Hammond, Incorporated, Maplewood, New Jersey, which made many reports available to us.

EXPLANATORY NOTES

In preparing Webster's New Geographical Dictionary, the objective has been clarity of presentation rather than absolute uniformity or rigid consistency in the arrangement of information. Thus the basic patterns of arrangement that are used in general throughout the book have been modified to suit the needs of particular entries. The basic patterns of the entries and the principal details of arrangement are described below.

1. General arrangement and kinds of information.

(a) The principal details of each entry (or numbered part of an entry) treating a political division are given usually in the following order: the entry word in bold-faced type with syllabic division plainly indicated; pronunciation (where not given in a preceding entry); alternative forms and names in bold-faced type (with syllabic division and pronunciation); identification; location; area and population; geographical and physical features; economic data; items of general interest, such as names of colleges and universities and historical information. If the historical information is of sufficient length or relative importance, it is placed in a separate paragraph introduced by the label History.

Obviously, not all of the details of the basic pattern described above are included at each entry, since in some entries certain details are not applicable or are not of sufficient importance to warrant inclusion.

(b) In entries treating natural features, besides the identifying description and the location, the following kinds of information are included: physical features, such as lengths of rivers, heights of mountains, lengths and areas of islands and of lakes; economic data, such as navigability of rivers, mineral wealth of mountains, agricultural and industrial products of islands; and historical information, as date of discovery, colonization, or acquisition.

(c) Details of information of the states of the United States usually follow a definite basic pattern: the entry word with its syllabic division and pronunciation; identification; geographical location; rank in area and the area; rank in population and the population; capital; date of admission to the Union; nickname; state flower; motto; rivers; mountains; chief products; chief cities; political divisions listed in tabular form; and history.

(d) The treatment of long entries of major countries, political divisions, etc., follows more or less closely the general arrangement used for states of the United States (see c. above). Sometimes, however, an entry may contain special information that requires treatment in a separate paragraph with an introductory word (as at Antarctica a paragraph headed Ownership).

(e) Many political divisions, such as departments, provinces, and counties, are entered with only a cross reference to a table at the main entry at which information about the political division can be found. See 7, below. Others are described briefly at their own entries, following the general arrangement of information (see a. above). Similar treatment is accorded to United States dams, national parks and monuments, and other such entries.

(f) Population data are presented in one of three ways: as estimates (e.); as preliminary census figures (p.); as final census figures (c.). With the abbreviation is given the year to which it applies. In entries containing more than one population figure for the same year, the year is given only once.

2. Alphabetical arrangement of entries.

(a) For entries in this dictionary, the ordinary rules of alphabetical sequence govern: (1) the single name; (2) this name with a preceding modifier—necessarily represented for alphabetical purposes with the modifier, preceded by a comma, following the name, (3) this name followed by another word or words. Thus:

George
George, Cape
George, Lake
George Bay
George V Coast
George Hill

A name containing a numeral, as George V Coast, above, is alphabetized as if the numeral were spelled out.

A name spelled as a solid word or a hyphenated word precedes the same name when spelled as two words; thus Georgetown precedes George Town.

(b) Names beginning with the prefix Mc or M' are all alphabetized as if spelled with the full form of this prefix, Mac. In alphabetizing, no distinction is made between these and other names (such as Mac- clesfield) in which the initial letters M a c are not a prefix.

(c) Names of natural features, such as capes, lakes, points, and straits, are generally entered at the significant part of the full name; thus, Cape Malea is entered at Malea, Cape; Point Barrow is entered at Barrow, Point; Lake Michigan is at Michigan, Lake; Strait of Malacca is at Malacca, Strait of; Paso del Inca is at Inca, Paso del.

(d) As a general rule, the words Bay, Island, Lake, Mount, etc., have been included as part of the bold-faced vocabulary entry. With rare exceptions, the word River has been omitted, so that the consultant looking for the Amazon River should look at Amazon.

(e) Names beginning with Al, El, De, Du, Des, L', La, Le, Les, etc., are alphabetized at Al, El, De, etc., respectively. Names containing "the" are at the main word; thus, The Everglades is at Everglades, The.

(f) Two or more names identical in spelling and pronunciation usually are combined in a single entry. Thus:

Den-der \den-dər\ or Din-dar \din-dər\. 1 Navigable rivers, W cen. Belgium; 42 m. long; flows N out of Hainaut prov. into the Schelde river at Dendermonde.

2 River, E Sudan; 300 m. long; rises in Ethiopia; flows NW into Blue Nile N of Sennar.

(g) Names with identical spelling that differ in pronunciation or etymology are often entered separately, as the entries at Acre, Bayonne, and Tigre.

3. Arrangement of parts within entries.

For numbered parts within an entry, the order described below has been followed:

(a) An alphabetical arrangement by country, except that places in the United States precede all others. Territories and dependencies of the United States and dependencies of other countries are treated as if independent countries.

When, however, the entry name applies to a country, this application of the name has generally been made the first item under the entry, followed by the remaining items in the order described above. See the entry at DENMARK.

(b) An arrangement of geographical and political categories under the countries, placing natural features ahead of political entities (arranged in descending order, e.g., state or province, county, city, town or village).

4. Composite entries.

It has occasionally been found desirable to treat in a single entry names that are related to each other or that form parts of a whole, in order to give the consultant a more complete geographical and historical picture. Such names are printed in bold-faced type. Thus, at Gaul are included the early divisions of the ancient country, at Nile are described the several sections of the river, at Taimyr Peninsula are included the similarly named Taimyr River, Taimyr Lake, Taimyr Bay, and Taimyr Island.

5. Tables.

To make more usable the information provided, entries of certain classes of names are given in the form of tables, and each name in the table (with the exception of UNITED STATES, Population of Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas) has been made a cross entry at its own alphabetical place in the vocabulary. For example, the counties of the state of California are listed in a table of California, and each county name as been cross-entered at its own alphabetical place in the vocabulary; the metropolitan boroughs of London are given in tabular form at London and each name has been cross-entered to the table at London. Other examples are the tables of ranges at Alps and of dams at Tennessee Valley Authority and the several tables at Canada and United States.

6. Syllabic division and pronunciation.

(a) Syllabic division. The syllabic division shown for a bold-faced name indicates, for the guidance of printers, proofreaders, writers, and others, those points at which the name may be divided at the end of a line. A name may be divided wherever a centered period or a hyphen appears in the bold-faced name. The rules for such division, established for each language by long and widespread practice, are in some respects more or less arbitrary; accordingly, the division of a name sometimes differs from that of its respelled pronunciation, which attempts to show how the word is syllabified when spoken.

(b) Pronunciation. Pronunciation is indicated by respelling the name in symbols used in Merriam-Webster dictionaries. A full key to those symbols is given on page xvi, and a guide key appears at the bottom of each odd-numbered text page in the dictionary. The pronunciation is enclosed within slant lines immediately following the bold-faced name.

Effort has been made to secure accurate information on the pronunciation of all names included in the dictionary, and the pronunciations included are in large measure based on information supplied by native speakers and by consulting specialists. Where usage has established one, an anglicized pronunciation has been given in addition to the local pronunciation.

Where there is more than one entry with the same bold-faced name, the pronunciation and syllabication usually appear at the first bold-faced entry. See Admiralty Bay. If there are two or more forms of the entry word with different spellings but the same pronunciation, the single pronunciation usually appears after all forms are given. See Abukir. In entries in which no syllabication and pronunciation are given, the syllabication and pronunciation are those of the nearest preceding entry or, in the case of differing pronunciations, those of the matching language. See Florida. A hyphen that precedes or follows a pronunciation indicates a previously pronounced element or a generic term.

7. Cross-references.

Two general types of cross-references are found in this dictionary: cross entries in the vocabulary and cross-references in the body of an article. The name to which the consultant is directed is indicated by the use of special type (SMALL CAPITALS) or by placing after the name the letters q.v. (for Latin quod vide = which see) or, if reference is to more than the one name, qq.v. (for Latin quae vide = which [plural] see). Thus:

Eger. 1 River, West Germany and Czechoslovakia. See OHRE.

2 City, Czechoslovakia. See CHEB.

Euxine Sea. See BLACK SEA.

Fauquier. County in Virginia. See table at VIRGINIA.

Federation of Malaya. See MALAYA, FEDERATION OF.

Finger Lakes . . . including notably lakes Seneca,

Cayuga, Keuka, Canandaigua, Owasco, and Skaneateles (qq.v.).

Gomera . . . One of the Canary Is. (q.v.)

Grand Coulee Dam. See UNITED STATES, Dams and Reservoirs.

Cross-references with "see" are frequently used in the body of an article. "See" leads to additional information. See the articles at American Samoa, Florida Keys, Germany, Hawaii.

Throughout this dictionary, the words UNITED STATES only are used in cross entries and cross-references that refer to the entry United States of America.

8. Abbreviations and symbols.

Abbreviations are used throughout the book, in vocabulary entries, tables, and maps, wherever it is felt that their use permits little or no difficulty of understanding. A few unconventional abbreviations are used on some maps due to space considerations. Points of the compass when used as directional points only usually are set in sans serif type with no following period (thus: SW Maine). A complete list of the abbreviations used in the text is given on pages xiv-xv. For symbols used on the maps, see the list on page xxvii.

GEOGRAPHICAL TERMS

A selection of geographical terms in various languages and their equivalents in English is provided in the following lists for the convenience of users of the dictionary. The terms have been selected on the basis of their usefulness to the average consultant. In addition to the names of physical features and of political divisions, the lists contain a number of words (such as old and new; eastern, western, and central; upper and lower) that are often used in compound proper names.

Each list is arranged in alphabetical sequence. The first, List I, gives foreign-language terms and their equivalents in English; the second, List II, gives English-language terms with their foreign-language equivalents. Names of languages are indicated by abbreviations, which, if not self-evident, may be identified in the list of abbreviations on pages xiv-xv.

MAP PROJECTIONS

One of the most difficult problems in map making is projection—the representation of the round surface of the earth on a flat surface such as a page or chart. Although before the Christian era it was known that the earth was round and certain methods of map projection were formulated and carried into execution, most maps remained comparatively crude by modern standards until the age of discovery in the 15th and 16th centuries began to fill the considerable gaps that had up to then existed in human knowledge of the world as a whole. This widening knowledge in turn stimulated cartographers to devise improved methods of projection.

Although maps of small areas may be true enough to scale throughout so that the distortion is for practical purposes of no consequence, maps of large areas—for example, a continent or a hemisphere—involve distortion of some degree, and this distortion varies throughout the area mapped. The extent that this distortion can reach is vividly brought out by one projection (Mercator) of the world, wherein the poles, which are actually mere points without any dimension, have the same dimension as the equator.

There is no one method of projection that is best for all purposes. All involve distortion of some sort, and what projection is best for a given case is determined by weighing the advantages against the disadvantages of each method in the light of the use to which the map is to be put and the size, configuration, and orientation of the area to be mapped. Not all projections would produce a desirable route map for long-distance airplanes. A country long from north to south and narrow from east to west (e.g., Chile) is not represented to best advantage by the projection that serves best for a country broad from east to west in relation to its depth from north to south (e.g., the United States or the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics).

Reference data employed by projectionists are the parallels of latitude, the meridians of longitude, the poles, and the equator.

Following is a brief description of some of the more commonly used projections. For those who would like a much fuller treatment, clarified by detailed illustrations, Erwin J. Raisz, Principles of Cartography (McGraw-Hill, 1962) and Arthur H. Robinson and Randall D. Sale, Elements of Cartography, 4th. ed. (John Wiley, 1978), may be suggested.

Hollow rubber balls painted as globes and generously lined with meridians and parallels of latitude can be used to advantage in explaining projections, and an imagined globe of this sort is used in a few of the explanations that follow.

Orthographic. This projection, conceived by Hipparchus about 125 B.C., presents the earth as it would appear to an observer a great distance above it. A sharp picture made by a camera held at a considerable distance from a globe would approximate such a projection. The center is satisfactorily true to scale, but the scale contracts as the distance from the center is increased. Hence this projection is not commonly used for extensive areas.

Azimuthal Equidistant ("azimuthal" means that true direction from the center of the map is preserved). A modern projection that serves well for continents or other large areas. Any point on the globe can be used as a center. (If one of the poles is used, the projection is called polar azimuthal equidistant.) Like the orthographic, the polar azimuthal equidistant projection is constructed around a central point, and the scale changes with the distance from this point. However, in the azimuthal equidistant, the scale along radii from this center is constant while the scale expands along circles (parallels of latitude) having this point as center, in proportion to the increasing size of the circles (in a polar projection of the whole world, the antipole is grotesquely exaggerated, appearing as the outermost circle); whereas in the orthographic the scale along such circles is constant, while the scale along the radii contracts in proportion to the distance from the center.

A hemispheric polar azimuthal equidistant projection can be roughly demonstrated by slicing a hollow rubber globe at the equator, cutting along the meridians of one of the halves almost up to the pole, pasting the sections on a flat surface (taking care that all the angles between sections are equal), and painting in the gaps between sections to make the broken land masses continuous.

Lambert's Azimuthal Equal-Area (devised by the German cartographer Johann Heinrich Lambert [1728–1777]). In this projection—which is best used for large areas, such as continents—the quadrilaterals formed by intersecting parallels and meridians are kept equal in area by decreasing the scale in the radial direction from the center inversely as it increases along the parallel circles about the center, with the result that at the edge of the map the quadrilaterals are considerably distorted in shape. (Among the projections that are not equal-area are conformal projections. In these the distortion of shape that is necessary to keep the quadrilaterals equal in area is not practiced, with the result that, although there is variation in the area of the quadrilaterals, elementary areas anywhere on the map have their correct shapes.)

Mercator. One of the best-known conformal projections, developed by the Flemish geographer Gerhardus Mercator (1512–1594) and first used in his chart of 1569. Such a projection of the earth as a whole is printed as a rectangle on which parallels and meridians appear as straight lines intersecting at right angles. All parallels of latitude have the same length as the central one, the equator (whereas actually they get progressively smaller toward the poles), and all meridians are parallel throughout their entire length (whereas actually they converge to a point at each pole). The presentation of areas not too distant from the equator is satisfactory, but there is great distortion, in scale, of the polar regions.

The construction of a Mercator projection of the world can be roughly demonstrated in this manner: Cut along one meridian of a hollow rubber globe all the way from north to south pole; cut along all the other meridians from the north pole almost to the equator, and then along all the meridians from the south pole almost to the equator. Flatten out the sectioned globe on a flat surface so that the equator lies directly over a straight line on the surface and the pointed section ends are separated from each other by a space equal to that between two adjacent meridians at the equator. Then paint in the gaps between sections to make the broken land masses continuous.

Mollweide (devised by the German mathematician and astronomer Karl Mollweide [1774–1825]). An equal-area projection of the world as an ellipse whose longer axis is twice the length of its shorter axis. The distortion in shape of the equatorial belt and particularly of the outer regions is the chief defect of this projection.

Sinusoidal. An equal-area projection somewhat similar to the elliptical Mollweide projection, but cone-shaped at the poles rather than flattened, the meridians being sine curves.

Conic and Polyconic. The conic projection, which originated with Ptolemy, is well suited to areas of wide spread from east to west lying between the equator and one of the poles, such as the United States or the Mediterranean area. In this projection use is made of the concept of a "standard parallel"—a circle of latitude at all points of which a hollow cone dropped down over a globe is tangent to the globe. With a paper cone and a hollow rubber globe, both with this circle of tangency marked on them, we may roughly demonstrate a conic projection in this manner: The standard parallel should pass about midway through the area being projected. Cut this area out of the rubber globe. Cut along each of the meridians from the north almost up to the standard parallel, and then do the same thing from the south. Unfasten the pasted-together or pinned-together cone so that it will lie flat. Then superimpose the sectioned area from the rubber globe on the cone (taking care that the standard parallel on the globe is lined up with the standard parallel on the cone), paste the globe sections to the cone, and paint in the gaps between the sections so as to make the broken land masses continuous.

The polyconic projection, which is well suited to areas long from north to south and narrow from east to west, is accomplished by imagining a number of coaxial cones of varying height, each tangent to the sphere at a different parallel. It was devised in the United States by the first superintendent of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, in whose maps it has been used for more than a century. The central meridian is a straight line, the other meridians are curved; the parallels of latitude are arcs of circles, not concentric, and are true to scale.

Other projections often used but not described above are the gnomonic, stereographic, parabolic, Albers conical, Lambert conformal conic, and Bonne. A transverse projection is one in which the orientation of its axis is not normal; e.g., the axis of a transverse Mercator projection may be a meridian or any oblique great circle instead of the equator, which is its normal axis construction. A transverse Mercator projection has been used to chart routes between distant points (e.g., international air routes). A transverse polyconic projection was used by the National Geographic Society for its large map (1944) of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Aa

Aa \ä\, 1 Small river, N France; rises in Pas-de-Calais dept., flows into North Sea at Grand-Fort-Philippe.

2 or Sar-ner-Aa \zär-när-ä\, River, Unterwalden canton, cen. Switzerland; flows N through Lakes Lungern and Sarnen into Lake of Lucerne

3 River, N cen. Switzerland, rises in Lucerne canton, flows N into Aargau canton, expanding into Lakes Baldegg and Hallwil, and continues into Aare river

4 Two rivers, Latvian S.S.R., U.S.S.R. See GAUJA and IICUPE

Aabenraa. See ÄBENRÄ

Aa-chen \äk-on, äk-\ 1 Administrative district, North Rhine-Westphalia, West Germany, 1208 sq. m., formerly part of Prussia.

2 or Fr. Aix-la-Chapelle \ak-slä-shä-pel\, anc. Aquae Gra-ni \ak-we-grä-ni, äk-\ or Aquis-gra-num \wäs-grä-nöm\, City, its *, 40 m. WSW of Cologne, pop. (1980c) 243,947, chemicals, glass, textiles, railroad junction; tourist resort, mineral springs and baths; town hall built 1333-70 on ruins of Charlemagne's palace; cathedral founded by Charlemagne c. 800; technical univ. (1870).

History: Site of Roman baths 1st cent. A.D., second capital of empire of Charlemagne, who was probably born there; favorite residence of Charlemagne after 768, center of Carolingian culture and site of Charlemagne's great palace (practically destroyed by Northmen 881 but restored 983); given rights of an imperial city 1166 and 1215; coronation city of Holy Roman Empire 813-1531; treaties of Aix-la-Chapelle drawn up here to provide for peace terminating War of Devolution 1668 and War of Austrian Succession 1748; given to France by Peace of Lunéville 1801; returned to Prussia 1815; scene of Conference of Holy Alliance (also called Congress of Aix-la-Chapelle) 1818; Prussian military base in Franco-Prussian War 1870-71; air base in World War I; captured by Allied armies Oct. 1944; over half the city was destroyed during World War II, but has since been rebuilt.

Aa-lün, El also Aa-lun or Al-un \el-i'-ün, -ä-yün\ or Laa-youne \li-, lä-\, Town, * of Western Sahara, NW Africa; pop. (1970c) 24,519.

Aalborg. See ÄLBORG

Aa-len \äl-on\, Industrial city, Baden-Württemberg, West Germany, 44 m. E of Stuttgart; pop. (1980c) 63,030; chemicals, iron goods, textiles; free imperial city 1360-1803.

Aaleund. See ÄLESUND

Abaco

Aals-meer \äls-,m(e)ä\, Commune, North Holland prov., Netherlands, 8 m. SW of Amsterdam; pop. (1981c) 20,471; horticultural center.

Aalst \älst\ or Fr. Alost \ä-'löst\, City, East Flanders prov., Belgium, 14 m. NW of Brussels; pop. (1981c) 78,938, beer, textiles, textile machinery; a former capital of the counts of Flanders; held by France 1667-1706, under German control Sept. 1914-Nov. 1918, and May 1940-Sept. 1944.

Aa-rau \är-au\, Commune, * of Aargau canton, N Switzerland, on Aare river 23 m. W of Zurich; pop. (1980c) 15,788; footwear, optical and scientific instruments; founded in 13th century; taken from Hapsburgs by Bern 1415; became capital of Helvetic Republic 1798 (see SWITZERLAND), capital of Aargau canton 1803.

Aa-re \är-ä\ or Aar \är\ or anc. Obrin-ga \o-'brin-gä\, River, cen. and N Switzerland; 183 m. long; flows NW from Bernese Alps, traversing Hasli Tal (valley) and passing through the Gorge of the Aare (Aa-re-schlucht \är-ä-shlukt\) then through Lakes of Brienz and Thun, past Bern, thence NE past Solothurn and Aarau to Rhine; navigable to Thun; connected by canal with Lake of Biel

Aa-r-gau \är-gau\ or Fr. Ar-go-vie \är-gä-'vè\, Canton, N Switzerland; * Aarau; dairy products, fruit; precision instruments; tourism. See table at SWITZERLAND

History: Anciently part of Helvetia; conquered by Franks in 6th cent.; under Hapsburgs 1264-1415; taken by Cantonal League and divided bet. Bern and Lucerne, in part to Helvetic Republic 1798; member of Swiss Confederation 1803; constitution fixed by Congress of Vienna 1815, replaced 1831.

Aarhus. See ÄRHUS

Aath. See ÄTH.

Abä \ä-'bü\, Town, East-Central State, Nigeria, ab. 40 m. NE of Port Harcourt; pop. (1982e) 210,700; furniture, soap, textiles.

Ab-a-co \ab-ä-,kö\, Two of the Bahama Islands, Great Abaco (80 m. long) and Little Abaco, in Atlantic Ocean E of S Florida; 776 sq. m.; pop. (with adjacent cays; 1970c) 6501.

Ābādān

Ābā-dān \äb-ä-'dän, äb-, äb-ä-'dän\. 1 Island, Khuzestan prov., W Iran, on the Shatt-al-Arab; 42 m. long, from 2 to 12 m. wide; probably settled before time of Herodotus; long disputed bet Persia and Turkey, but assigned to Persia by treaty 1847.

2 Town on Abadān I., on the Shatt-al-Arab, 33 m. from Persian Gulf; pop. (1971e) 280,000, large oil refineries.

Ābā-deh \äb-ä-'dä\. Town, Fars prov., SW Iran, 110 m. N of Shiraz, pop. (1966c) 10,888.

Abae \ä-,bä\. Ancient town, Phocis, cen Greece, on Boeotian border 10 m. SE of Elateia; famous for oracle of Apollo, pillaged by Persians, partially restored through Emperor Hadrian.

Abae-te-tu-ba \ä-,bi-tä-'tü-bä\. Municipality, Pará state, N Brazil, pop. (1980c) 74,630.

Abai. See NILE

Abai-ang \ä-'bi-än\. Island (atoll), NW Kiribati, W Pacific Ocean, just N of the equator; 16 m. long by 5 m. wide; first residence of American missionaries 1857, under Hiram Bingham.

Abā-kan \äb-ä-'kän\. 1 River, Khakass Autonomous Oblast, Russian S.F.S.R., U.S.S.R., 350 m. long, rises at W end of Sayan Mts. and flows NE to Yenisei river.

2 Town, * of Khakass Autonomous Oblast, Russian S.F.S.R., U.S.S.R., on the Yenisei at confluence of the Abakan; pop. (1979p) 128,000; food products, lumber, textiles; metalworking.

Amer-i-ca \ə-'mer-ə-kə\ or Span. or Port. Amé-ri-ca \ä-'mer-ē-kä\. A name derived from Americus Vesputius, Latinized form of name of Amerigo Vespucci (1451–1512), Italian navigator and first used in a popular account of his travels in the New World published 1507 by the German geographer Martin Waldseemüller. Originally (as applied by Waldseemüller), the lands discovered by Columbus, i.e. South America and the West Indies; later (as used 1538 by Mercator), the New World, i.e. the lands of the Western Hemisphere. In current use either continent of the Western Hemisphere (North America or South America); often, specifically, the United States of America (q.v.); also, although in this application the plural form the Americas is the usual one, all the lands of the Western Hemisphere including North America, South America, and the West Indies.

History: Earliest European discovery of any part of the Americas was of NE coast of North America by the Norse (Leif Ericsson 1000, Thorfinn Karlsefni 1004–06), general European knowledge of the Americas dates from the voyages of Columbus, whose first landfall was at San Salvador (island in the Bahamas) Oct. 12, 1492, and who later (voyages of 1495, 1498, 1502) touched coasts of Central and South America; in Europe until 16th and 17th centuries known as the Indies, West Indies, or New World; separation of North America from Asia established by voyage of Magellan 1519–21. For more detailed information, see NORTH AMERICA, SOUTH AMERICA, CENTRAL AMERICA, WEST INDIES.
